David and Juanita contributed to the economic development of Prince George's County, and they were key contributors to the growth and development of area churches. Their efforts were acknowledged by numerous awards, certifications, and special recognitions.

In addition to their service to the community, David and Juanita served the REALTORS® of Prince George's County and Maryland in many capacities. ## Samuel Dixon Art Outside the Box

Maryland artist Samuel Dixon was selected for inclusion in the Hyattsville Community Development Corporation's Traffic Box Art Wrap project, designed to transform select traffic signal cabinets in Riverdale Park community into public artworks. Traffic signal cabinets—the stainless steel structures located at every signalized intersection. Dixon's entries "Garden Movement," a charming floral watercolor painting wraps is located at the intersection of 48th and Riverdale Road. This public art allows the community of Riverdale Park to brand themselves and encourages a sense of ownership and pride within the neighborhood. The transform cabinet helps brighten the landscape of the Prince George's County community and can be a small but important way of creating a sense of neighborhood identity.

Samuel Dixon, primarily a watercolorist, also works in oil and acrylics, described as an American Abstract Impressionist. Influenced by painting of Monet, Whistler and the branch of impressionist, his works capture the essence of inspiration and temperament.

Nearly 58,000 Marylanders Gain Health Coverage During Two Special Enrollment Periods

By PRESS OFFICER

Prince George's County MD

LANDOVER, Md. (July 16, 2020)—A total of nearly 58,000 Marylanders enrolled in health coverage during Maryland Health Connection's two special enrollment periods that began in February and March and ended Wednesday, July 15.

The Maryland Health Insurance Easy Enrollment program launched Feb. 26 as the first of its kind in the nation. The Comptroller of Maryland asked state tax filers to check a box on their state tax return if they lacked health insurance and desired that information to be shared with the Maryland Health Benefit Exchange. Several states are in the process of looking at creating similar programs.

Since February:

- More than 41,000 filers checked the box
- More than 3,700 enrolled as of July 13

Final numbers are pending, because tax filers had until the July 15 tax filing deadline to check the box on their state tax form, and will have several weeks to enroll.

On March 16, the marketplace also opened a special enrollment period in response to the coronavirus pandemic. With support from Gov. Larry Hogan and participating insurance providers, Maryland held one of the longest special enrollment periods in the nation.

"Maryland Health Connection was quickly able to respond to this global crisis and help our Maryland families get the health coverage they need," says Michele Eberle, executive director of Maryland Health Benefit Exchange.

Since March 16 when the coronavirus special enrollment period began, 54,028 enrolled. Of those:

- 35 percent purchased private plans
- 65 percent enrolled in Medicaid
- 90 percent of enrollees received free or reduced cost coverage
- Prince George's County had the highest enrollment with 10,897;

Montgomery County had nearly as many, with 10,594

- Ages 18–34 made up 35 percent of enrollments
- Nearly a third were self-reported Black/African American, the largest group of enrollees

Marylanders who have lost health coverage due to job loss or have experienced other major life changes may still be eligible to enroll through Maryland Health Connection within 60 days of the loss of coverage. Those who qualify for Medicaid may enroll any time of year.

To enroll, visit MarylandHealthConnection.gov or download the free "Enroll MHC" mobile app. For free consumer assistance, call 855-642-8572 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on weekdays.

La Reine Science Center, vision of President Marco Clark

"These 23 years have been the most gratifying and joyful time of my life," Dr. Marco Clark wrote in his farewell letter to the Bishop McNamara family and friends. He is moving on to the role of Executive Director of the Holy Cross Institute at St. Edward's University in Austin, Texas.

During his tenure as President and CEO, he encouraged tremendous development at Bishop McNamara High School, in Forestville, but his greatest vision has been for the La Reine Science and Innovation Center, which had its groundbreaking in December.

"The Center will be a hub for technology, collaboration and discovery by offering new academic programs in science, technology, cybersecurity, engineering, entrepreneurship, and multimedia," according to the Mustang Messenger. "By providing students with next generation, hands-on learning experiences, Bishop McNamara hopes to develop the innovators of tomorrow.

"The Center will offer seven classrooms, five of them as customary science labs, featuring two chemistry, two physics and a health science lab. The state-of-the-art innovation lab will be the centerpiece of the building, complete with industry leading hardware such as 3D printers, vinyl cutters, drill presses and computer components that can make a machine run and affect its performance." The doors of the Center are due to open in 2021.

The Center honors the legacy of La Reine High School, an all-girls' school in Suitland (now Drew-Freeman Middle School), which closed in 1992 due to low enrollment. Bishop McNamara, then an all-boys' school, went co-ed. All seven of my children attended either La Reine or McNamara.

For President Marco Clark, "This is just the culmination of a dream."

Neighbors & other special people

Wanda Leonard, Upper Marlboro Commissioner and former mayor Wanda Leonard died suddenly June 30 at the age of 58. Among her many honors, she was an honorary member of the Marlboro Volunteer Fire Department.

Remembering Malcolm Grow Hospital

The building I've known for years as Malcolm Grow Hospital at Andrews is being demolished.

It was named for Maj. Gen. (Dr.) Malcolm Grow in 1962, a man who served as a field doctor in both world wars and was selected the first Air Force Surgeon General in 1949. He was active in military medicine until his death in 1960.

The hospital was originally named the USAF Hospital Andrews, built at the cost of $5.5 million. Construction began in June 1955 and was completed in May 1958.

Today the hospital is mostly rubble. I don't know what will replace it. Medical care is offered to military families in the new sprawling Malcolm Grow Medical Clinics and Surgery Center.

By the way, on the Net, I came across a letter from "Joel." He was seeking a photo of the old hospital where he was born in 1965. He wrote he was "born in the hallway of the ER on his way to labor and delivery."

Morningside Memories: the Sub-Teen-Club

In 1996 Tillie Seaman, of Suitland Road (later, Skyline Terrace), had a dream: a reunion of Sub-Teen members. They had been kids, ages 10 to 14, who joined in 1958-1967 so they could attend well-chaperoned dances. Tillie's daughter Janice D. Graves sent letters to those listed on the original membership cards.

Wayne Neale and Donna Bookhultz Bivens helped with the planning. Notices were posted in several County papers and the Penny Saver, and four radio stations.

They sold 158 tickets and had 12 guests. It was a huge success! Everyone enjoyed talking and dancing—the Stroll, Hokey-Pikey, Conga, Twist and the Limbo. Plaques were presented to the founders, Tillie Seaman, Charlie McKeown and Versie Carson (accepted by her son Marshall Carson).

After cost, $500 proceeds were donated to the Morningside Recreation Council, for the children of Morningside.

Margie Sproesser, born Election Day 1932

Marjorie Maye "Margie" Sproesser, 87, of Clinton, died June 6. She was born Election Day, Nov. 7, 1932, the day President Franklin Roosevelt was elected.

She was born in Washington, the 5th child of Francis Joseph and Mary Elizabeth Murray, and grew up on the Murray farm in TB until the family moved to The City. She graduated from St. Cecelia's Academy in 1951. She made lifelong friends there and fell in love with Paul Sproesser. They wed in 1953 and lived in Congress Heights until moving to Clinton in 1964.

In 1969 Margie learned to drive and went to work for the Census Bureau as a statistician. Her name was listed as an author in each published statistical manual until her retirement at age 65.

Margie was proud of her Irish roots and traveled to Ireland. She was a member of St. John's Church in Clinton for 56 years and was a Eucharistic Minister. She was an officer in the Silver Hill Lions Club.

She was predeceased by Paul, her husband who died in 2000, siblings Francis Murray, Mary Frances Mazzullo and Catherine Loretta Reed. She was the mother of Carol, James, Mary Kathryn, Paula, Paul and Kevin (d. 2019); grandmother of 12 and great-grand of six.

Margie was the longest standing member of her TOPS chapter.

County Executive Announces COVID-19 Ambassador Compliance Team

Inspectors from Several County Agencies Will Conduct Inspections to Ensure Businesses are in Compliance With COVID-19 Safety Protocols LARGO, Md. (July 17, 2020)—Prince George's County Executive Angela Alsobrooks announced today that she has created a COVID-19 Ambassador Compliance Team, consisting of more than 70 inspectors from multiple County agencies, who will begin conducting inspections at restaurants, retail establishments and businesses across the County. The inspections, which [began last] weekend, will ensure that establishments are adhering to COVID-19 protocols such as facial covering requirements and social distancing. The announcement comes as the County has seen slight increases in some coronavirus data points.

"Prince Georgians have done a tremendous job of wearing masks, practicing appropriate social distancing and staying home unless they need to go out for essential trips," said Alsobrooks. "However, we have seen a slight increase in certain data points, so we are taking this opportunity to remind everyone of the importance of continuing to be vigilant with these safety protocols and to help ensure our businesses are adhering to them as well, so we don't have to endure another shutdown."

Over the last couple of weeks, the County has seen slight increases in the infection rate and number of new cases, but other key factors such as the positivity rate, available hospital bed capacity and number of people hospitalized due to COVID-19 have continued to trend in the right direction.

The Ambassador Compliance Team [began] visiting establishments throughout the County on Saturday, July 18. Initially, the focus will be distributing information packets regarding COVID-19 protocols, monitoring for capacity compliance, appropriate social distancing and face coverings, and ensuring hand washing and sanitizer is staged for use by patrons and staff.

Business and retail establishments that are violating these protocols will be given a short period of time to come into compliance. If they are not in compliance during a second visit, they could be subject to a fine of $1,000. Those who remain non-compliant on a third visit, would be shut down until they come into compliance.

The goal of the Ambassador Compliance Team is to help save lives and prevent businesses from having to close by informing and educating businesses and retail establishments about the proper protocols and how to comply with them. Information about safety protocols for businesses can be found on the County's coronavirus webpage at health.mypgc.us/coronavirus.

Earn an Accredited High School Diploma Online With a Scholarship From PGCMLS

By DONNA SCOTT-MARTIN
PGCMLS

LARGO, Md. (July 20, 2020)—The Prince George's County Memorial Library System (PGCMLS) supports lifelong learning for adults with a unique opportunity to earn an accredited high school diploma online with a full scholarship through Career Online High School (COHS). The program is open to Prince George's County residents who have successfully completed 8th grade and will be at least age 21 by September of their enrollment year. PGCMLS will award full scholarships for the Career Online High School to qualified learners looking to earn a high school diploma and advance their careers. COHS is a GED alternative that provides students with maximum flexibility to earn a valuable credential online at a self-directed pace.

Part of the world's first accredited, private online school district, Career Online High School is designed to reengage adults into the education system and prepare them for entry into post-secondary career education or the workforce. Interested Library customers are asked to first complete a self-assessment, which will determine eligibility. Once eligibility is determined, PGCMLS staff interview prospective students prior to awarding tuition scholarships.

Once enrolled, Career Online High School pairs each student with an Academic Coach, who assists with developing an individual career plan, offers ongoing guidance and encouragement, evaluates performance, and connects the learner with the resources needed to demonstrate mastery of the course material. COHS diplomas are AdvancED/SACS/NCA/NWAC-accredited and fully integrated with the Common Application ("Common App") system for applying to higher education programs.

PGCMLS staff member Andrea Thomas, who serves as the program lead for COHS and area assistant for the New Carrollton Branch Library discusses the valuable opportunity that COHS presents below:

Career Online High School is a gem in the offerings from PGCMLS. It is a wonderful program that allows the student to receive a diploma instead of a GED. PGCMLS is proud of the 24 students who have successfully graduated from the program. They are a diverse group with wonderful stories. One of our students had to move to Canada while she was working on her program. Through her determination and grit, she finished even though she moved several times. Another one of our students found that she had to take a sabbatical in the middle of her studies. She returned and finished her degree. I would recommend this program to anyone who is serious about completing their studies. It is not easy, but it is so worth the effort!

Classes are supported by board-certified instructors and students have 24/7 access to the online learning platform. Coursework begins in one of eight high-growth, high-demand career fields—across a wide spectrum from childcare and education to certified transportation—before progressing to the core academic subjects. Many students are able to graduate in as few as four to six months by transferring previously earned high school credits. Get empowered to open doors to new opportunities. COHS is only available in English at present. English language learners are encouraged to utilize the Library's free language resources to prepare to be successful with COHS.

Maryland Community Health Resources Commission Awards Prince George's Community College COVID-19 Emergency Relief Grant

By COURTNEY DAVIS
Prince George's Community College

LARGO, Md. (July 16, 2020)—Prince George's Community College (PGCC) announced today that it has received a $50,000 COVID-19 Emergency Relief Grant from the Maryland Community Health Resources Commission. Funding will be used to provide a new telehealth/telemonitoring student wellness program focused on diabetes, obesity, and hypertension, and personal protective equipment for PGCC students and community members.

Prince George's Community College program director for the Wellness Center, Michele Richardson, and the dean of Student Success and Engagement, Dr. Scheherazade Forman, will collaborate to identify and enroll 50 high-risk students who voluntarily choose to participate in the program. Grant funds will provide each participant with a special glucometer, blood pressure machine, or weight scale to use at home, and the devices will send data automatically to a monitoring physician under contract with the College. The physician will provide monthly monitoring of each participant's data and will provide education, advice, and medication adjustments, as appropriate.

"We are particularly excited about this grant because it will allow PGCC's Wellness Center to serve students and community members in new ways," said Anne Shepard, director of Grants and Resource Development. "As always with our grant projects, we keep the fact that we are the community's college in mind and try to match regional needs with funder priorities—and this grant does just that. When our community does well, our College will do well."

"We are pleased to support Prince George's Community College in their efforts to provide access to health care services for its student population as our state perseveres through the impact of COVID," commented Mark Luckner, executive director, Maryland Community Health Resources Commission. "The Wellness Center is an important resource and the Commission is thrilled to support its delivery of services for students."

In order to establish sustainability, both for this project and for the new health practices individuals put into place through the monitoring program, participants will agree to complete both a pre-test and a post-test regarding their health-related practices and their particular health conditions. They will also view a webinar related to nutrition and healthy cooking during their participation in the project. Baseline physiologic parameters of each participant will also be measured to assess the effectiveness of and build a case for the project's sustainability.

Similar programs have shown excellent outcomes, helping to reduce the severity and incidence of illness and severe complicating factors that can result from underlying conditions such as those addressed in the new grant program. Such underlying conditions are a particular concern, as we grapple with COVID-19 and its myriad impacts.

Project takeaways are expected to include better health for participants, a pilot program that can be replicated not only at PGCC, but also at other colleges, and data that PGCC can use to secure funding for this and similar projects after the grant term ends.

Rabid Cat Alert in Prince George's County

Health Department seeks public's help identifying others who may have been exposed

By DELLIA HAWTHORNE WILLIAMS
Prince George's County Health Department

LARGO, Md. (July 18, 2020)—The Prince George's County Health Department is alerting community members that a rabid cat was recently found in the 16000 block of Baden Westwood Rd, Brandywine, MD. On or around July 9, 2020 a stray cat bit an individual. The cat is described as a short haired female orange and white tabby with a pronounced limp to the back legs and might have been seen with at least 4 kittens. The cat was captured, euthanized and sent for rabies testing. The Maryland Department of Health (MDH) confirmed that the cat tested positive for rabies on July 14.

Due to the risk of rabies exposure, the Health Department seeks the public's help in finding any persons who may have had contact with the cat in the identified area. If you know of any persons or animals that may have had contact with the above cat or kittens between June 25 and July 9, please contact the Health Department immediately at 301-583-3750.

"Rabies is often a life-threatening disease; however, it is highly preventable by beginning post-exposure treatment immediately following exposure. Treatment is determined by the type of animal contact and patient assessment," said Dr. Ernest Carter, Prince George's County Health Officer. "Rabies is transmitted through the saliva of an infected animal and is easily transmissible through a bite of an infected animal. The best method to eliminate the risk of rabies exposure is to avoid contact with unfamiliar animals. We Following broad input from families, employees and community members, PGCPS will continue distance learning through January 2021. Prince George's County has been the epicenter of the COVID-19 public health crisis in Maryland. In light of the health disparities in communities that house more than 136,500 students and 20,000 employees, there is a significant public health concern if schools were to reopen this fall for in-person instruction.

Recently parents, educators and administrators were surveyed about their preferences for the upcoming school year given the ongoing pandemic. Forty-six percent of families expressed their preference to continue the distance learning model implemented in the spring; the percentages of educators and administrators in favor of distance learning exceeded 50 percent.

"During this global pandemic, we cannot ignore the health and safety of our students, parents and educators even while working each day to provide the highest quality teaching, learning and leadership at every school," said Dr. Goldson. "Our students and families are facing a disproportionate impact of the COVID-19 outbreak. We recognize that no scenario is perfect or comparable to a traditional school year. While it is a difficult decision to not reopen our school buildings for in-person instruction, it is necessary to keep our students and communities safe."

This fall, PGCPS will enhance the distance learning program with enhanced learning software and more live instruction blended with pre-recorded lessons. Student meals will be available for distribution at all schools. The school system will also establish Parent Support Centers throughout the county to assist families with technology support and other aspects of distance learning.

Today's announcement is an important step forward in providing families with information to help make the best decisions for their children.

[This] week, PGCPS will release a report outlining how the school system will support all students, in particular English language learners, those with special needs and youth from families with low-income, during the distance learning phase. A special Board of Education meeting will be held in late July to review the plan.

As during the initial distance learning phase, PGCPS will invest in helping to close the digital divide by providing devices and internet connectivity for families in need. The school system will distribute additional devices prior to the first day of school, Monday, Aug. 31. As part of a new districtwide 1:1 technology initiative, PGCPS aims to equip every student with their own digital device.

PGCPS will continue working with state and local health experts, government partners and the Maryland State Department of Education as information about the pandemic continues to evolve. The school system will adhere to guidelines from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, mandate social distancing and hand washing, require face masks in PGCPS buildings and conduct thorough cleaning and sanitizing procedures.

Reopen PGCPS Plan

ChildWatch:

Protecting Children During Pandemic Times

On July 21 and 22, people of faith from across our nation will gather for a virtual CDF Samuel DeWitt Proctor Institute for Child Advocacy Ministry. Our theme is Re-Imagining Our Future: Children, Justice, and Joy. Registration is free and open to all and more important than ever because of the extraordinary struggles our nation is facing. At this moment it has never been clearer that unwavering faith and an unceasing commitment to building a beloved community and a just nation are urgently needed. This year's Proctor will feature an extraordinary array of prophetic leaders, theological leaders, and presenters. On July 19, 20, and 23, extra sessions specifically designed for seminarians and students will be available and open to everyone. Our virtual Proctor will also feature focused calls to advocacy action to lift up children's needs, get out the vote, and encourage elected officials to act on CDF's policy agenda that could not be more timely or important. COVID-19 poses an unprecedented public health, economic, and unemployment crisis across our nation magnifying the impact of systemic racism, poverty, economic disparities and economic injustice based on race and gender. The needs of our nation's most vulnerable children—children of color, immigrant children, poor children and children in the child welfare system—must remain the top priority.

Thanks to the leadership of our great Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi, the U.S. House of Representatives passed the HEROES Act, an expansive plan that builds on the groundwork laid by previous coronavirus relief packages to ease the damaging health and economic effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. Speaker Pelosi is the right woman in the right place at the right time. She has long been a champion of children's and families' needs and has helped lead the charge to provide relief during the unprecedented COVID-19 crisis. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell has refused to take up the House bill, noting he was hitting "pause" on additional COVID-19 legislation until at least July. His inaction is nothing new. He has neglected the great needs of tens of thousands of people in his state while in Congress and voted against the interests of the most vulnerable of his Kentucky constituents. Under Speaker Pelosi's leadership, the House of Representatives has passed and sent to the Senate at least 23 bills (many of which are reflected in CDF Action Council's recent Legislative Report Card) that if enacted would improve the odds for America's children left behind. Majority Leader McConnell has refused to bring even one to the floor for consideration. The House proposals range from the much needed HEROES Act to address the ongoing pandemic to housing assistance for youth aging out of foster care, veteran families, and children in low-opportunity neighborhoods; strengthening the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA); the American Dream and Promise Act; and a bipartisan firearms background check bill that would take a critical step forward to help address America's deadly romance with guns.

The White House and Senate GOP leadership have claimed their next COVID-19 relief package would be about "bringing back jobs and making sure we take care of our kids." Let's hold Republican leaders accountable for ensuring any next COVID relief package includes significant action to protect our children.

The House bill included much of what our children and families need to weather this unprecedented crisis. At the same time, many additional provisions are needed to fully meet the needs of all our nation's children and families, especially the most vulnerable. Majority Leader McConnell should immediately move forward additional COVID-19 legislation next week that includes critical provisions for children and families. Research shows that the investment Congress has already made to date to support children and families is working, but it must be sustained and broadened to prevent our unacceptable poverty rate from growing even larger and to make sure we Leave No Child Behind.

This crisis has upended every aspect of all of our lives. Millions of children have lost the stability that all children depend on. This has meant disruption of important daily routines with beloved caretakers or teachers and classmates. For millions, it's meant the loss of regular instruction in school—increasing the risk of children falling behind. Families and parents who have lost jobs need more help immediately.

There are two things you can do right now to help. Please join CDF's Proctor Institute July 19–23 for Re-Imagining Our Future: Children, Justice, and Joy. And please make it your top priority to hold your congressional leaders accountable for ensuring no child is left behind and that babies and children take precedence over wealthy individuals and corporations. —July 17, 2020

To Be Equal:

Our Children's Lives Are Too Precious to Risk Reopening Schools Without a Safety Plan

"Common sense and intelligence can still determine what we do, even in this crazy environment. We're not going to use our children as guinea pigs."

—New York Governor Andrew Cuomo

Of the many questions the deadly coronavirus pandemic has forced the nation to confront, the question of whether to reopen schools is one of the toughest.

Experts agree that the shutdown is widening the racial achievement gap. Black parents are far more likely to work in jobs that can't be done from home, so they're less available to supervise at-home learning. More than a third of low-income households with school-age children don't have high-speed internet access, compared to just 6% of affluent households. One in four teenagers in a low-income household don't have access to a computer.

Getting students safely back in school should be a top priority. But the Trump administration keeps ignoring the "safely" part.

It's true that children seem less susceptible to infection, but scientists aren't sure why. Children under 19 represent 22 percent of the population, but only 5 percent of coronavirus cases. And 90 percent of children who contracted the virus experienced mild or non-existent symptoms. But children with underlying conditions such as diabetes, congenital heart disease, seizures and obesity are at higher risk for serious symptoms. And far too little is known about a rare but serious complication of the virus known as multi-symptom inflammatory disease, or the role children might play in spreading the virus to adults.

Rather than devise a comprehensive plan to deal with the risks, the Trump administration wants to ignore them. The Centers for Disease Control has issued guidelines for schools, but both President Trump and Vice President Pence have urged school districts not to follow them and have even pressured the CDC to change them.

The National Academies of Science, Engineering and Medicine, an influential committee of scientists and educators, this week issued a report that stressed the urgency for younger children to attend school in person. But the committee recommended safety guidelines even more stringent than the CDC's, experts went further than guidelines issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, calling for surgical masks to be worn by all teachers and staff members during school hours, and for cloth face coverings to be worn by all students, including those in elementary school.

According to an alarming report by the Washington Post, "White House officials hope Americans will grow numb to the escalating death toll and learn to accept tens of thousands of new cases a day."

Simply put: we will not.

President Trump himself has pointed toward the experiences of countries like Germany, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, where reopened schools have not led to major outbreaks. But the virus is under far better control in Europe than it is in the United States. The U.S. has set new records for daily infections seven times in the span of 11 days. In the past two weeks, more than 692,000 new cases were reported in the U.S. The European Union, with a third more residents, reported about one-twelfth as many cases.

We desperately need to send children back to school. And we desperately need to reopen our economy. But we can't do either until we bring the virus under control.

Prince George's County State's Attorney Aisha N. Braveboy's Statement Updating the Community on Operation Safe Release

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (July 16, 2020)—Prince George's County State's Attorney Aisha N. Braveboy released the following statement to update the community on Operation Safe Release:

"As we begin to progress towards entering into Phase Three of our courthouse reopening process, I am pleased to update the community on our Operation Safe Release efforts. Since the start of the pandemic, I have stressed the importance of moving swiftly and responsibly to reduce the jail population. And I am well aware of the impact that the coronavirus has had on our community and inside the jail. As State's Attorney, I made it a priority for my office to be proactive in safely reducing the jail's population. This is reflected in our outcomes.

"On March 1, 2020, we activated Operation Safe Release, where we have been actively working with the Office of the Public Defender, the Judiciary and the Department of Corrections to reduce the jail population. Our efforts are ongoing, which is critical to ensuring that the detention center has the designated space to appropriately care for those who must remain in custody as a matter of public safety.

"As a result, we safely reduced the jail population by 192 inmates since March 1, 2020, an almost 40% reduction. There were 718 inmates in the county's detention center on March 1st. As of July 1, 2020, there were 526—approximately 1/3 of the detention center's inmate capacity—who remain in custody, most of whom are charged with violent crimes, very serious offenses or serving out sentences. Over 1,600 individuals have been released from the detention facility to include those defendants released during their initial appearance before a Commissioner, which occurs shortly after their arrest.

"Under Operation Safe Release, each case is reviewed to determine the appropriate recommendation for release. The State's Attorney's Office is not considering the release of defendants who pose a risk of danger to any alleged victims and/or the community at large. The goal is to safely and judiciously reduce the inmate population, prioritizing everyone's health and safety during the coronavirus crisis.

"My first priority will always be the safety of our victims and our community. As such, we cannot and will not recommend the release of any individual charged with a violent crime, such as murder, rape, child sex abuse, or any other similarly serious offense and who poses a danger to the community. Under no circumstance will 100% of the prison population be released.

"I am especially grateful to the leadership of the County and members of our Circuit and District Court bench for accommodating our efforts. To the residents of this great County, I thank you for your continued support and for apprising my office of your concerns to be addressed. You know firsthand what is actually happening here in Prince George's County and we are grateful to continue serving each of you. You have assured us that our efforts to prevent the spread of coronavirus while maintaining your safety have been effective.

"My office will continue to participate in all pretrial release hearings at both the commissioner level and before a judge to provide the appropriate recommendations. We remain committed to the importance of addressing and protecting public safety at all ends of this ongoing crisis now, and in the days and weeks to come."

Prince George's Community College Commits to 100 Percent Student Voter Registration and Participation

By COURTNEY DAVIS
PGCC

LARGO, Md. (July 14, 2020)—Prince George's Community College (PGCC) President Dr. Charlene M. Dukes has joined more than 160 other college presidents and chancellors in committing to full student voter registration and participation on their campuses in all elections through the ALL IN Campus Democracy Challenge (ALL IN). To support full student voter participation of all eligible students, ALL IN and its Higher Education Presidents Council has launched a call to action for higher education presidents and chancellors to fully engage students in electoral participation.

"I am proud to sign the Higher Education Presidents' Commitment to Full Student Voter Participation," said Dukes. "We are committed to working with campus stakeholders to increase electoral participation in 2020 and beyond. As an institutional leader, I value providing opportunities to empower all eligible voters at PGCC to register and turn out to vote."

While college student voter participation in elections increased from the 2014 midterm election to the recent 2018 midterm election, less than half of college students made their voices heard by casting their ballots. According to the National Study of Learning, Voting, and Engagement, voter turnout at the more than 1,000 institutions participating in the study increased by 21 points from 19 to 40 percent.

"Today, young people are truly seeing how the decisions their elected officials make impact their everyday lives, and in this critical time, ensuring that they are able to make their voices heard safely is critical," said Jennifer Domagal-Goldman, executive director of the ALL IN Campus Democracy Challenge. "We are excited to partner with higher education leaders across the country to change the culture at colleges and universities around engagement in our nation's political process. We are calling on all college presidents to make this commitment to their students, campuses, and communities."

By signing the pledge, Prince George's Community College is committed to ensuring all eligible students are able to register to vote and cast informed ballots in the 2020 general election and beyond. Further, the College is committed to fostering campus cultures that support nonpartisan student civic learning, political engagement, and student voter participation. As such, the College will organize virtual registration and voter turnout parties around National Voter Registration Day on September 22 and Vote Early Day on October 24.

The ALL IN Campus Democracy Challenge is a nonpartisan, national initiative recognizing and supporting campuses as they work to increase democratic engagement and full student voter participation. The Challenge encourages higher education institutions to help students form the habits of active and informed citizenship, and make democratic participation a core value on their campus.

More than 650 campuses, enrolling more than 7.5 million students, have joined the Challenge since its launch in summer 2016.

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty:

Why Won't Social Security Give Me My Widow's Benefit?

By RUSSELL GLOOR,
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty:

I have been a widow since November 2019. I retired under the Federal Civil Service Retirement System. Before my husband died, I made an appointment with Social Security to see if I could receive his Social Security if he passed on. I was told I could. Since he passed, Social Security has adamantly refused to let me have my husband's Social Security. I have had many problems with them. Who is correct here? I have lost $1400 per month. My social security check is about $126 per month. Signed: Frustrated Widow

Dear Frustrated Widow: First, please accept my condolences on the loss of your husband. Unfortunately, I don't have good news for you.

Because of your Federal Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) pension, you are subject to the "Government Pension Offset" (GPO) provision of Social Security. The GPO reduces the survivor benefit for anyone who also has a pension from an employer which did not participate in Social Security (neither the employer or the employee paid into Social Security), and your Federal CSRS pension falls into this category. GPO reduces any survivor benefit you might otherwise be entitled to by 2/3rds of the amount of your CSRS pension, which often eliminates the survivor benefit. For clarity, GPO also applies to a Social Security benefit from a living spouse.

As you probably already know, your CSRS pension caused your own Social Security benefit, earned from other work outside of your Federal employment, to be reduced by the Windfall Elimination Provision (WEP). Unfortunately, whoever you previously spoke with at the Social Security Administration prior to your husband's death gave you some incorrect information, because you are also subject to the GPO. And that is why Social Security will not now pay you a survivor benefit from your husband.

I'm afraid you have no recourse on this, as both the GPO and WEP have been the law for decades. The Federal Government has now changed to a "Federal Employee Retirement System" (FERS) which fully participates in Social Security (both employees and the employer contribute to Social Security), so more recent Federal retirees are not subject to the WEP and GPO rules. But there are still many U.S. State and local government employers which, to varying degrees, do not participate in Social Security and whose employees are still impacted by both GPO and WEP.

Historic Preservation: A Step on the Road to Social Equity

African American Cultural Heritage Action Fund Announces $1.6M for Its 2020 Grantees

By PRESS OFFICER

National Trust For Historic Preservation

WASHINGTON (July 16, 2020)—The call to action by American citizens during this year has made us all rethink how we view American history. Protestors have demanded the nation target injustice and fix the systems that promote the unequal treatment of African Americans. The African American Cultural Heritage Action Fund was founded at a similar time of crisis, after the 2017 rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, that led to the creation of a national preservation campaign meant to uplift and honor the Black American experience.

“The AACHAF was created out of the recognition that we in the field of preservation needed to do more,” said Brent Leggs, executive director of the African American Cultural Heritage Action Fund. “We realized that the American story we often tell repeatedly negates the transformative contributions of African Americans, whose capability, intellect, and creativity were and still are invaluable to the building of this nation. The Trust decided then and there to create the Action Fund as a way to help fill in those gaps. We realized that preservation of historic sites, where African Americans changed the American landscape, could be one way our nation comes to understand the need to create a more fair and just society. We saw a more inclusive approach to historic preservation as one step on the long road to heal the divisions between us.”

Through its African American Cultural Heritage Action Fund, the Trust is investing more than $1.6 million in grants to 27 sites and organizations across 22 states and the District of Columbia. Thanks to our partnership and a generous grant provided by The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, we are funding communities to protect, restore, and interpret African American historic sites and uncover hidden narratives of the African American contribution to the American story.

“The Action Fund plays a crucial role in elevating Black voices and stories in our national dialogue about arts and culture, and in expanding our collective knowledge and understanding of African-American history,” remarked Mellon Foundation President Elizabeth Alexander. “We are thrilled that the 2020 Action Fund grants will continue to provide transformative support to Black cultural organizations and heritage sites throughout the country.

Leggs underscored the importance of this work, noting, “The recipients of this funding exemplify centuries of African American resilience, activism, and achievement, some known and some yet untold, which tell the complex story of American history in the United States. Over the past two years, the Action Fund has funded 65 historic African American places and invested more than $4.3 million to help preserve landscapes and buildings imbued with Black cultural heritage. With urgency and intention, the nation must value the link between architecture and racial justice and should fund these and other cultural assets to ensure their protection and preservation.”

Grants are given across four categories: capacity building, project planning, capital, and programming and interpretation. Local grantees include:

Banneker-Douglass Museum Foundation

Maryland Commission on African American History and Culture (Annapolis, Maryland)

The Banneker-Douglass Museum is the only museum in the country operated by an African American state commission, the Maryland Commission on African American History and Culture—the first state ethnic commission in the nation. Housed within the 1874 former Mt. Moriah AME Church, the museum’s hiring of a development director will help them achieve their programmatic and philanthropic goals.

The Clifton House (Baltimore, Maryland)

Home of luminary African American poet Lucille Clifton, the Clifton House will provide established and emerging writers and artists with networking and creative development, education, and programming opportunities.

Association of African American Museums (AAAM) (Washington, D.C.)

With 539 members in 41 states, AAAM is the premier organization for African American museums nationwide. Funding will enable AAAM to strengthen their board and create training for its members about the preservation, identification, and evaluation of African American historic sites.

5 Ways Seniors Can Safeguard Against Cyber Criminals Stealing Their Identity

As the use of personal computers and cell phones has grown over the last two decades, identity theft has surged. One study found that over 14 million consumers were victims of identity fraud in 2018, and that their out-of-pocket costs totaled $1.7 billion.

Seniors have been particularly vulnerable in recent years to online scams and telemarketing tricks. Unfortunately, another negative effect of COVID-19 has been scammers targeting seniors and the elderly by developing coronavirus hoaxes that prey on fears of the virus.

The growing problem of identity theft for all age groups makes it vital for consumers to develop a strategy to protect their devices, and those of their loved ones, although no system is perfect, says Chris Orestis (www.retirementgenius.com), a senior care advocate known as the “Retirement Genius” and president of LifeCare Xchange.

At a minimum, no one should give out their Social Security number to a stranger and should never click a link in an email from an unknown source. But cyberthieves have many ways to steal your identity, invade your computer, or raid your bank account and credit cards. What should you do to protect yourself from these scam artists and criminals?

“First, it’s important to understand that identity-theft protection services don’t actually stop identity theft,” Orestis says. “There is no fool-proof way to stop identity theft from happening; there are just too many different types of valuable information and avenues for cyberthieves to hack them.

“The Federal Trade Commission actually prohibits identity-theft services from using the word ‘prevention,’ and if a company is promoting that as part of their service they should not be trusted. But regardless of any service you might use, no one can be disengaged from protecting their own identity. It’s important to take care of your identity and credit health with smart and regular maintenance, just like you do with your physical health.”

Orestis offers a five-step plan to help protect your identity:

- Register for fraud alerts. “You want these alerts on credit cards and bank accounts so you can be notified quickly of any suspicious activity on your accounts,” Orestis says. “With fraud alerts, data security companies and financial services will text, email or phone you if there is a suspected security breach, or if they detect spending on a card or account that doesn’t align with your spending habits or your location.”
- Review accounts regularly. Vigilance of your identity protection means you should go over your monthly bank and credit card statements and review online account activity weekly. “Immediately notify your bank or credit companies if you detect fraudulent activity,” Orestis says. “Either freeze your account or cancel your card. If you believe there could be a problem with your credit, you can place a credit freeze by phone with each credit agency’s customer service line.”

- Monitor your credit reports. Orestis says monitoring credit reports from Experian, Equifax and TransUnion is another way to find discrepancies that may indicate fraud.

- Don’t leave a paper trail. “It’s a good idea to get rid of physical private records and statements that include personal or financial data,” Orestis says. “Identity thieves get into mailboxes and trash. They can use receipts to piece together your personal data, so it’s smart to shred those and avoid any kind of paper trail.”

- Create strong passwords. Orestis suggests mixing upper and lower-case letters with numbers and symbols, and to avoid using the same password for every account. “Not having a strong password on your smartphone or computer is like leaving your house with the front door wide open,” Orestis says. “Identity thieves are counting on people to use the same or similar passwords for their electronic devices and financial accounts. Mix up your passwords, and change them whenever you suspect an account has been compromised.”

“Identity theft and cyber security are a very real threat in today’s internet-connected world,” Orestis says. “We all live online and are exposed to a lot of risk if we don’t do the right things to protect ourselves.”

Over $1.4 Million Announced to Support Green Infrastructure Projects to Improve Communities and Provide Jobs

By PRESS OFFICER
Chesapeake Bay Trust

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (July 14, 2020)—The Chesapeake Bay Trust, manager of the funds from the “Protect the Chesapeake” license plate program, in partnership with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR) announce $1,429,161 in funding for the Chesapeake Bay Green Streets, Green Jobs, Green Towns Grant Program (G3). These awards help communities develop and implement plans that reduce stormwater runoff, increase the amount of green spaces in urban areas, improve the health of local rivers, streams, and the Chesapeake Bay, create “green jobs,” and enhance livability in cities and communities.

This announcement highlights awards made to 25 innovative green infrastructure projects that span Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia with almost half of the recipients being new applicants to the program.

The work of the G3 program is intended to facilitate and encourage community integration of green techniques into traditional “gray” infrastructure projects. As communities have to, for example, repave roads, reconfigure intersections, or implement other gray infrastructure projects, the G3 program encourages them to add green elements at little additional up-front cost for cost effective savings on stormwater treatment, flooding abatement, and other community benefits.

“The EPA congratulates all of our grantees for putting forth Green Infrastructure projects that will support clean water and strong neighborhoods,” said EPA Mid-Atlantic Regional Administrator Cosmo Servidio. “We are proud to assist communities in their efforts to reduce pollution to local waters and the Chesapeake Bay while improving their economy and quality of life.”

The awardees announced today will not only implement projects that include enhanced community safety and quality of life, the removal of impervious surfaces, expansion of urban tree canopies, inclusion of bioretention and other stormwater treatment practices, vacant lot retrofitting, and other green infrastructure practices throughout the region’s watershed, but also share their plans and projects to ensure that others in the greater Chesapeake Bay watershed community can benefit from their lead.

“The communities and organizations receiving awards today serve as models for the entire Chesapeake watershed and beyond,” Maryland Department of Natural Resources Secretary Jeannie Hadaway-Riccio said. “By supporting these green infrastructure initiatives, we will continue to foster innovation and acknowledge the multiple benefits of meeting our water quality goals.”

Eligibility for application extends to communities within Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Washington, D.C., Virginia, and West Virginia thanks to the collaboration of funding partners within Maryland and the Mid-Atlantic region.

“This year, perhaps more than ever, communities are seeing the importance of providing green spaces and green features that encourage their residents to walk, recreate, and just ‘be’ outdoors,” stated Dr. Jana Davis, executive director of the Chesapeake Bay Trust. “During these times of the pandemic, so many more residents are realizing the aesthetic, health-related, and even economic power of being outdoors, and grants like these will enhance their ability to do so.”

'Disk Detective' Needs Your Help Finding Disks Where Planets Form

By ELIZABETH LANDAU
NASA Headquarters, Washington, D.C.

Planets form from gas and dust particles swirling around baby stars in enormous spinning disks. But because this process takes millions of years, scientists can only learn about these disks by finding and studying a lot of different examples.

Through a project called Disk Detective, you can help. Anyone, regardless of background or prior knowledge, can assist scientists in figuring out the mysteries of planet formation. Disk Detective is an example of citizen science, a collaboration between professional scientists and members of the public.

"We're trying to understand how long it takes for planets to form," said astrophysicist Marc Kuchner, the Disk Detective project lead at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland, and the Citizen Science Officer for NASA's Science Mission Directorate. "Tracing the evolution of these disks is the main way that we know how long planet formation takes."

Disk Detective has just relaunched with a new website and a new dataset of about 150,000 stars. This new version of the project focuses on M dwarfs, which represent the most common type of star in the Milky Way galaxy. It also concentrates on brown dwarfs, which are balls of gas that don't burn hydrogen the way stars do and often more closely resemble giant planets like Jupiter.

After reading the instructions, participants can start identifying disks right away in Disk Detective. The interface presents a series of real astronomical images and asks visitors questions that will help determine more definitively if a disk is present. The images come from NASA's Wide-Field Infrared Survey Explorer (WISE), which now operates as NEOWISE, as well as the ground-based Panoramic Survey Telescope and Rapid Response System (Pan-STARRS) in Hawaii and the NASA-funded Two Micron All-Sky Survey (2MASS), which operated from 1997 to 2001.

"We have multiple citizen scientists look at each object, give their own independent opinion, and trust the wisdom of the crowd to decide what things are probably galaxies and what things are probably stars with disks around them," said Disk Detective's director, Steven Silverberg, a postdoctoral researcher at Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Kavli Institute for Astrophysics and Space Research.

Advanced users learn more about the objects they're studying using professional data archives. Those who contribute substantial insight receive credit on scientific papers describing the discoveries made through Disk Detective's efforts. Professional scientists then follow up on citizen scientists' input using more sophisticated tools and new observations. Fifteen citizen scientists have already become named co-authors on peer-reviewed scientific papers through Disk Detective.

One enthusiastic Disk Detective "superuser" is Hugo Durantini Luca, a computer technician in Córdoba, Argentina. He began classifying disks with the project in 2014 and since then has taken on additional responsibilities: writing tutorials, moderating discussions, and even helping use telescopes in South America to follow up on interesting targets. While he became involved because of his interest in detecting planetary systems and analyzing images, he says he highly values "the way you are able to work with the science team directly." He is in frequent communication with Kuchner and other professional astronomers, and he participates in a weekly video call for superusers.

"I think we are going to have an interesting new season," Durantini Luca said. "The new way we are processing the data will allow us to analyze the image[s] with better detail."

Citizen scientists at Disk Detective made an important discovery in 2016: a new class of disks, called Peter Pan disks. Most disks around young, low-mass stars should lose their gas, due to planet formation and natural dissipation into space, after 5 million years. Yet Disk Detective citizen scientists discovered a disk with plenty of gas orbiting a star that is roughly 45 million years old.

Since then, seven similar mysteriously young-looking disks have been found, each at least 20 million years old. Scientists are still puzzling out why planet formation goes on for so long in these disks. They predict that citizen scientists may find as many as 15 new Peter Pan disks through the newly revamped Disk Detective.

"To figure out how disks evolve, we need a big sample of different kinds of disks of different ages," Kuchner said.

More recently, Disk Detective's efforts resulted in a discovery announced on June 2 at the American Astronomical Society's (AAS) 236th meeting, which was held virtually. With the help of citizen scientists, astronomers identified the closest young brown dwarf disk yet, one that may have the capability to form planets. This 3.7-million-year-old brown dwarf, called W1200-7845, is about 333 light-years away. A light-year is the distance light travels in one year; the closest star beyond the Sun is over 4 light-years away.

"There are not many examples of young brown dwarfs so close to the Sun, so W1200-7845 is an exciting discovery," said Maria Schutte, a predoctoral graduate student at the University of Oklahoma, who led the study and presented the findings at the AAS meeting. Durantini Luca and other citizen scientists were included as co-authors.

Since the last Disk Detective data release, ESA's (European Space Agency's) Gaia satellite has delivered an unprecedented bounty of information about the locations, movements, and types of stars in the Milky Way. The Disk Detective science team used the new data from Gaia to identify M dwarfs of interest to the project. A second improvement to the project is that the new images from the surveys listed above have higher resolution than the previous batch of data, making more background objects visible.

"NASA needs your help," Kuchner said. "Come discover these disks with us!"

The Virtual Unveiling of the Fascinating Stones:

The Shona Sculptures of Zimbabwe

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (July 14, 2020)—The San Diego African American Museum of Fine Art (SDAAMFA) is pleased to announce the unveiling of its first virtual exhibit, "Fascinating Stones: The Shona Sculptures of Zimbabwe". The exhibit features Shona sculptures which are part of a larger African Art collection, formerly owned by Al and Betty Waxman and recently donated to SDAAMFA by their daughters Sheri Roseman and Denise Miller.

African stone sculptures from Zimbabwe are called Shona sculpture, after the largest tribe engaged in sculpting. In the Shona language "Zimbabwe" means "great house of stone" and it is fitting that stone sculpture is the art that most represents the people of Zimbabwe. The energy, the vast varieties of stone and the tremendous skill of the sculptors has led to major exhibitions worldwide and have been greeted by remarkable critical acclaim.

Major art institutions noted in the beginning of the 20th century that "Shona Sculpture was perhaps the most important art to emerge from Africa." The inspiration for the artists is steeped in traditional culture and the resulting contemporary sculptures leave many wanting more. "I collect art from all over the world, and I have found the contemporary style of Shona art powerful, distinctive, and extremely beautiful," said SDAAMFA Board Member Fern Nelson.

The exhibit is available on the museum website at www.sdaamfa.org

The Waxman Collection is the largest permanent African Art collection received by SDAAMFA to date. The collection includes a variety of African art pieces which celebrate the traditional customs and tribal life of several countries in Africa. We look forward to sharing additional pieces of the collection in the near future.

Classical Pianist Brian Ganz Performs Chopin's Revolutionary Etude and Others for Free River Concert Series Online Performance

July 24, 2020 at 7 p.m.

ST. MARY'S CITY, Md. (July 15, 2020)—Pianist Brian Ganz will perform a selection of nine Chopin etudes including the "Revolutionary Etude" as part of a virtual performance for St. Mary's College of Maryland's River Concert Series Friday, July 24, at 7 p.m. EDT. "The Sheer Virtuosity" free concert will also feature mezzo-soprano Olivia Vote and The Chesapeake Orchestra Strings. The concerts will be available online at St. Mary's College website: <http://www.smcm.edu/river-concert/>

Ganz will discuss how Chopin took piano music in new directions in the first half of the 19th century and took piano technique in new directions too. Ganz said, "In his late teens, Chopin began writing what are quite simply the greatest etudes (French for 'studies') ever composed for the piano. I'll be playing a selection of etudes from the 12 Chopin published as Opus 10, among them the wild (and wildly popular) 'Revolutionary' Etude. Tune in to watch and hear how Chopin set out to help young pianists the world over develop and hone their technical virtuosity, and ended up creating works of stunning beauty and emotional power."

This is the first year the River Concert Series has been performed virtually. Music Director of the Chesapeake Orchestra and Chair of the Music Department at St. Mary's College of Maryland, Jeffrey Silberschlag, explained, "For the safety of our audience and our artists, it is the only reasonable alternative. However, the resulting programs are a lot more creative and fun than one might have imagined at the onset of the change." The final concert of the series will take place on July 31. All video performances will be archived for viewing anytime at the SMCM River Concert web site. —Chesapeake Orchestra

Sheehy Auto Stores Announces Plans for 23rd Annual Sheehy 8000 to Benefit the American Heart Association

Community-Wide Effort Runs July 17–September 8 with Outreach, Virtual Events & More!

By HILLARY REYNOLDS
for Sheehy Auto Stores

FAIRFAX, Va. (July 16, 2020)—Sheehy Auto Stores is proud to announce the return of the 23rd annual Sheehy 8000 Sales Race, a community-wide initiative in which all 29 Sheehy dealerships sell cars while raising awareness and funds to benefit the American Heart Association, to run from July 17 through September 8.

"The Sheehy 8000 is one of our most significant annual sales events and fundraising partnerships," said Vince Sheehy, President of Sheehy Auto Stores. "As we all navigate living through the COVID-19 pandemic and our new reality, it is important now more than ever to stay well through heart healthy diets and exercise. We are proud to once again partner with the American Heart Association and their 'Healthy for Good' initiative to provide homebound and socially distant support and guidance."

Last year, the Sheehy 8000 campaign raised $300,000 for the charity. To date, Sheehy's fundraising efforts have raised more than $40 million for community and non-profit organizations, and over $1.6 million raised for the American Heart Association.

Each of Sheehy's 29 dealerships throughout Washington, DC, Richmond, VA, Hagerstown and Baltimore, MD will lead various initiatives in support of the Sheehy 8000 to include virtual events to engage the community with ways to stay heart healthy and safe while maintaining social distance during the COVID-19 pandemic.

"All of us at the American Heart Association are grateful for Sheehy's unwavering loyalty during these unprecedented times. COVID-19 disproportionately affects heart and stroke patients, making their support more important and life-saving than ever," says Soula Antoniou, Executive Director at the American Heart Association.

"The Sheehy 8000 is a phenomenal sales race and truly a team effort! The commitment of Sheehy's employees, vendors and customers can be seen in funds raised and the lives impacted—in Sheehy dealerships and in our communities," added Antoniou. "With over $1.6 million raised to date, this campaign has made much of our work around blood pressure management, healthy food access, and CPR training possible. From the bottom of our hearts, thank you!"

The mission of the American Heart Association is to build healthier lives, free of cardiovascular diseases and stroke.

Sheehy Auto Stores is the 37th largest dealer group in the country and serves customers throughout the Mid-Atlantic. A family-owned business which began as one Ford store in 1966 in Marlow Heights, Md., the company has grown to more than $1.6 billion in sales with more than 45,000 new and used vehicles sold each year. The company is recognized as a leader in customer satisfaction, retention and community involvement. For more information, visit www.sheehy.com.

Rabies from A3

encourage community members to report any unusual or erratic animal behavior they notice and to avoid handling and feeding any unknown animals in their community."

When a person is bitten or exposed to the saliva of a rabid animal, the disease is prevented by administering four doses of rabies vaccine over a 14-day period, and a dose of rabies immunoglobulin given at the beginning of treatment. Each year, approximately 900 Marylanders receive preventive treatment after exposure to a rabid or potentially rabid animal.

- To prevent your exposure to rabies:
- Do not approach, handle or feed stray dogs and cats, and enforce leash laws.
  - Teach your children not to approach any unfamiliar animals.
  - Have your dogs, cats and ferrets vaccinated against rabies and keep the vaccinations up-to-date.
  - Do not leave pets outside unattended or allow them to roam free.
  - Cover garbage cans tightly and do not leave pet food outside; this may attract wild and stray animals.
  - Teach children to stay away from wild animals or animals they do not know.
  - Prevent bats from entering your home by using window screens and chimney caps and by closing any openings greater than 1/4 inch by 1/2 inch. Bats found in the home should be safely collected, if possible, and tested for rabies.
  - Wear gloves when handling an animal if it has been in a fight with another animal. Keep it away from people and other animals and call your veterinarian or local health department to report the animal exposure.
- If you are bitten by or exposed to an animal that may be rabid, you should take the following steps:
- If it is a wild animal, try to trap it if you can do so safely. If the animal must be killed, try not to damage the head.
  - If it is an owned animal, get the animal owner's name, address, and telephone number.
  - Immediately wash the wound well with soap and water; if available, use a disinfectant to flush the wound.
  - Get prompt medical attention.
  - Immediately report the exposure to your local animal control agency, health department, or police.
  - Consider treatment if a bat was present and exposure cannot be reasonably ruled out (e.g., a sleeping person awakens to find a bat in the room, or an adult sees a bat in the room with a previously unattended child or mentally disabled or intoxicated person).
