Maryland Vaccine Equity Task Force Conducts Clinic at First Baptist Church of Highland Park

By SHAREESE CHURCHILL
Office of the Governor

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (March 18, 2021)—[Last Thursday], Lieutenant Governor Boyd K. Rutherford toured the Maryland Vaccine Equity Task Force vaccination clinic at First Baptist Church of Highland Park in Prince George's County. The clinic, facilitated in partnership with Safeway, provided 200 doses of the Moderna COVID-19 vaccine.

The lieutenant governor's visit comes the same day as Governor Larry Hogan announced Maryland surpassing the 2 million vaccination milestone, as well as the timeline for Maryland to begin Stage 2 of its vaccination plan. Marylanders age 60 and older will be eligible for vaccination March 23.

"In the next few weeks, we could get more vaccines from the federal government, and over the next few weeks, substantially more people will become eligible to receive a COVID-19 vaccine," said Lt. Governor Rutherford. "It is crucial that we continue building out the infrastructure with clinics like this one, so we can deliver vaccines to people in all communities."

Lt. Governor Rutherford was joined by Dr. Henry P. Davis III, pastor of First Baptist Church of Highland Park, as well as members of the Prince George's County Council, including Councilman Mel Franklin and Councilwoman Jolene Ivey.

Next week, the clinic at First Baptist Church of Highland Park anticipates distributing 500 vaccines to the community. Learn more about the Maryland Vaccine Equity Task Force at governor.maryland.gov/vetf.

One Year Into the COVID-19 Pandemic, No Kid Hungry Has Provided $1.5 Million In Grants to Help Maryland Schools and Nonprofits Serve Free Meals for Kids

By JOHANNA ELSEMORE
No Kid Hungry Campaign

BALTIMORE, Md. (March 16, 2021)—Since COVID-19 first forced students across Maryland to transition from classrooms to virtual learning, No Kid Hungry has provided a total of more than $1.5 million in grants to schools and community organizations across the state that are providing free meals for kids. The funding has helped expand and improve meal programs to meet the increased need while also adapting to safely reach children regardless of where they're learning.

The crisis of the past year has reversed a decade's worth of progress toward ending child hunger. Today, as many as 1 in 4 kids in Maryland could be facing hunger, compared with 1 in 6 prior to the pandemic.

"It's been nearly a year since the pandemic upended daily life in Maryland, putting many more children at risk of hunger. The economic devastation this has caused for families will continue even as case counts go down and Marylanders are vaccinated. No Kid Hungry remains committed to supporting the meal programs that will be a critical lifeline for kids and families as we begin to rebuild from this crisis," said No Kid Hungry Maryland Director Ayesha Holmes.

Grant funding from No Kid Hungry helps school districts and community organizations with the added staffing and equipment costs required to expand and adapt their programs to meet increased need and operate safely under these unprecedented circumstances, using grab & go, delivery and other innovative models.

No Kid Hungry has also launched a text line to help families find free meals for kids and other food assistance. You can text "FOOD" or "COMIDA" to 877-877 or visit No Kid Hungry's Meal Finder Map to find resources in your community.

Since March, No Kid Hungry has granted to the following schools and nonprofits:

Adventist Community Services of Greater Washington

By SHAREESE CHURCHILL
Office of the Governor

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (March 16, 2021)—Governor Larry Hogan toured the community vaccination site at the First Baptist Church of Glenarden, which is facilitated by a partnership between the Maryland Vaccine Equity Task Force and the University of Maryland (UM) Capital Region Health. He was joined by Prince George's County Executive Angela Alsobrooks; Brigadier General Janeen Birkhead; Acting Secretary Dennis Schrader of the Maryland Department of Health; Nathaniel Richardson Jr., president and CEO of UM Capital Region Health; and Pastor John K. Jenkins, Sr.

"By harnessing the clinical expertise of one of our world-class hospital systems, the logistical capabilities of the Maryland National Guard, and the trusted voices of Maryland's faith leaders, this new clinic will serve hundreds of Prince George's County residents every day," said Governor Hogan. "It is a shining example of Maryland's adaptive, comprehensive, and community-centered vaccine strategy, and one more way we are ensuring equitable access to vaccines."

Learn more about the Vaccine Equity Task Force at governor.maryland.gov/vetf/.

The clinic, held in the church's 63,000-square foot family life center, will administer approximately 200 doses today as part of a soft launch, and ramp up to nearly 1,000 shots per day.

Initial appointments have been made available to individuals who have pre-registered through UM Capital Region Health. Additional appointments will become available in the coming days. At this time, the clinic is dedicated to serving residents of Prince George's County.

UM Capital Region Health will supply vaccines and support personnel, which means no resources will be diverted from the county government or the Six Flags America mass vaccination site.

Responsible Legacy Task Force Launches Survey to Solicit Input Concerning the Future of County Monuments and Landmarks Linked to A Prejudiced Past

Newly-Launched Survey to Aid in Determining the Best Path Forward

By ANGELA J. ROUSON
Prince George's County Council Media

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (March 17, 2021)—The Prince George's County Responsible Legacy Task Force (RLTF), established by Council Resolution-81-2019, has launched a countywide survey seeking input from residents and stakeholders concerning the renaming of County buildings, landmarks and public areas linked to a prejudiced past. The Prince George's County Responsible Legacy Task Force is working to ensure that the County's legacy is one of equality, diversity and inclusion.

The newly launched survey asks residents for input concerning the evaluation process for existing names and what factors should be considered in the renaming process. Additionally, residents are asked to share their knowledge of landmarks that may be linked to historical figures with ties to racism and discrimination, and offer new names for consideration.

The Responsible Legacy Task Force is committed to engaging Prince George's County residents in the process of reviewing the names of County buildings and places of honor to determine if they are linked to a prejudiced past and chart the best path forward. The Task Force encourages community input during this process and urges residents to complete the survey and share their insight, as well as any information that might aid in the decision-making process.

The Prince George's County Responsible Legacy Task Force submitted its Interim Report on December 30, 2020. The final report will be prepared on or before June 30, 2021. The deadline to complete the survey, is March 31, 2021. Visit <https://pgccouncil.us> for the survey and criteria for evaluation.

Florence Cray, knitted covers and hats for Walter Reed amputees, dies at 97

Florence B. Cray, military wife, volunteer, florist and longtime Skyline resident died January 2021 at a Boca Raton hospice. She was 97.

Originally from Fall River, Mass., Florence married her high school sweetheart, James Robert Cray, and together they embarked on a military career that lasted 25 years and eventually brought them to Andrews AFB where they put down roots.

They were the first residents of a home on Elmendorf Drive, in the Skyline community, and were founding members of the Skyline Citizens Association. The Crays were parishioners at St. Philip the Apostle where some of their children attended elementary school. The six Cray offspring graduated from La Reine, Suitland or Crossland.

Florence was active with Andrews Officer's Wives Club for more than 50 years. During the 1960s and '70s, she was a Red Cross assistant, helping with Viet Nam wounded as they were brought to Andrews. A knitter, she made caps and covers for amputees at Walter Reed Medical Center and hats and blankets for babies born in local military hospitals.

She worked for years at Andrews Florist—later known as La Fleur Florist—in Andrews Manor Shopping Center.

Florence and James moved to Owings Mills six months before James died in March 2013. Florence was mother of John, Jimmy, Pamela, Cynthia, Lisa and the late Sheila; grandmother of ten and great-grandmother of four.

In November 2019 Florence traveled to South Florida to winter with Cyndi, but her health failed and Covid hit. She was unable to return to Maryland where she had left so many good friends. She'll be buried later with James at Arlington.

Mary's Covid report

My local family turned out last weekend to celebrate my 92nd birthday. They built me a new picnic table, cleaned house, provided delicious food and beautiful cakes and great fun. It was our first family gathering in more than a year, safer now since all the adults have had at least one shot. Most have had two.

PGCMLS Offers Mother Goose on the Loose: Hatchlings Program

By DONNA SCOTT-MARTIN

The Prince George's County Memorial Library System

LARGO, Md. (March 16, 2021)—The Prince George's County Memorial Library System (PGCMLS) offers a range of engaging programs for children and families to promote early literacy and kindergarten readiness. This spring, PGCMLS will offer the new "Hatchlings: Read to Hatch" program to expectant mothers as a part of the Maryland State Library's Hatchlings pilot project from March to June, 2021. PGCMLS is one of only four library systems in Maryland selected to participate. This program is based on the award-winning early-literacy Mother Goose on the Loose: Hatchlings program for parents and caregivers of children from birth to 3 years old and the Mother Goose on the Loose Goslings program for premature babies and their mothers created by Betsy Diamant-Cohen, DCD.

In March and April, PGCMLS library staff will initially work with partners like the County's two Judy Hoyer Centers to recruit and register families for these sessions. Interested families can register directly with the center or organization where they are affiliated. The program will be available in both English and Spanish. This program will increase participant awareness of the importance of reading, singing, and talking to their babies daily, before, and after birth. "We want to empower parents as their child's first and best teacher," commented Pamela Hamlin, Family Literacy Specialist at PGCMLS.

Parents that attend "Hatchlings: Read to Hatch" will gain knowledge about key developmental stages in their newborns along with participating in fun activities that provide age-appropriate stimulation. The goal for parents and caregivers is to develop a daily reading routine with their babies. Participants will receive a board book, song sheet, and early literacy calendar to use with their newborns and be invited back in the fall to attend "Hatchlings: In the Nest," a series of parent/infant storytimes.

With the support of community partners, the awareness of library programs, resources, and services will increase among families that are underrepresented and are not established library users. Additional "Read to Hatch" programs with partners and through the library will be offered later in the spring. For more information, please contact Pamela Hamlin.

The Hatchlings project steering committee includes Carrie Sanders, Maryland State Library; Dorothy Stoltz, Carroll County Public Library; and Elaine Czarnecki, Early Literacy and Assessment Consultant. The three other library systems involved in the pilot project are Carroll County Public Library, Calvert County Library, and Howard County Library System.

Children from birth to age 5 that reside in the County are invited to participate in PGCMLS' Books from Birth program to receive a free book by mail every month. MakeMake (Lectorum) offers animated children's ebooks in Spanish (and bilingual English/Spanish). OverDrive includes appropriate ebooks and audiobooks for kids.

CITY OF SEAT PLEASANT NOTICE OF A PROPOSED REAL PROPERTY TAX INCREASE

The Mayor and City Council of Seat Pleasant propose to increase real property taxes.

1. For the tax year beginning July 1, 2021 the estimated real property assessable base will increase by 2.7% from 319,174,604 to 327,925,359.
2. If the City of Seat Pleasant maintains the current tax rate of $.58 per $100 of assessment, real property tax revenues will increase by 2.7 % resulting in $50,754 of new real property tax revenues.
3. In order to fully offset the effect of increasing assessments, the real property tax rate should be reduced to $.5645, the constant yield tax rate.
4. The City is considering not reducing its real property tax rate enough to fully offset increasing assessments. The City proposes to adopt a real property tax rate of $.58 per $100 of assessment. This tax rate is 2.7 % higher than the constant yield tax rate and will generate $ 50,754 in additional property tax revenues.

A public hearing on the proposed real property tax rate increase will be held at 6:30 pm on Monday April 12, 2021 at City Hall, 6301 Addison Road, Seat Pleasant, Maryland 20743.

The hearing is open to the public and public testimony is encouraged. Persons with questions regarding this hearing may call Mike Lightfield, Interim Chief Financial Officer at (301) 336-2600 for further information.

COLUMBIA, Md. (March 16, 2021)—The Restaurant Association of Maryland Education Foundation (RAMEF) will host its first-ever "Brunch Battle" on Wednesday, April 14 in Columbia, Maryland. Maryland ProStart® students from high schools across the state will be paired with professional chef mentors for a live Iron Chef-style culinary competition. The top three students will walk away with bragging rights and a cash prize while the first-place team's chef mentor will win a chance to compete for Team Maryland in the Bacon Category at the 2021 World Food Championships in Dallas, Texas.

"Our Maryland ProStart program provides high school culinary enthusiasts with the knowledge, skills, and opportunity to begin their journey toward becoming future restaurant and foodservice leaders," said Kirsten Unger, ProStart Program Coordinator, RAMEF. "We're excited to host this unique event while giving students a unique opportunity to further develop their culinary expertise in a fun, competitive setting."

Eleven high schools from Anne Arundel, Harford, Howard, Montgomery and Prince George's counties will be competing at the first-ever Brunch Battle, alongside 24 chef mentors ranging from skills and expertise in BBQ, American fare, seafood and more. Prior to competition day, students and chefs will connect through a Zoom meeting to introduce themselves, decide on a menu item and a game plan. Armed with their ideas, they'll have one hour to select their ingredients, then prep and plate their best brunch dishes.

Due to COVID-19 health protocols, each team will be allowed four viewers onsite. The Brunch Battle will also be live-streamed via TheAvenue.Live.

"The RAM Education Foundation and Maryland ProStart® program are an essential part of our association. Their efforts help make passion a reality by offering a pipeline of opportunity for those interested in pursuing a career in the culinary arts. At a time when restaurants are climbing their way back from a challenging year, the Brunch Battle is a great way to celebrate the joy of food and the future of our beloved industry," added Marshall Weston Jr., president & CEO, RAM.

ProStart® is a nationwide, two-year high school program that unites the classroom and industry to develop the best and brightest talent into tomorrow's restaurant and foodservice leaders. COVID-19 Vaccines: Finding the Right Facts

I learned my first lessons about injustice and health growing up in segregated Bennettsville, South Carolina. I remember being awakened in the middle of the night after a Black migrant family's car collided with a white truck driver's vehicle on the highway in front of our church parsonage, and the horror I felt when my Daddy, siblings and I witnessed the white ambulance driver and attendant arrive on the scene only to leave behind the seriously injured Black migrant workers after they saw that the two white drivers were not hurt. I also remember my parents' and church members' sadness over the senseless death of little Johnny Harrington, who lived three houses down from our church parsonage and who died after he stepped on a rusted nail because his hard-working grandmother didn't know about the need for or have the money for him to get a tetanus shot. The sorrow and outrage I felt as a child helped shape my life's work. Way before and through the Civil Rights Movement it was always clear that health care was one of the basic rights for which we were fighting because it could mean life or death.

The COVID-19 pandemic has put the life or death consequences of our nation's enduring health disparities on full display. Black, Latino and Native Americans and low-income white families, including children, are getting sick and dying at disproportionate rates. Now that COVID-19 vaccines are available, making sure communities of color have ready and equitable access to them is critical. And despite a dark history of past mistreatment and distrust in the health care system, Black and brown communities must not let any untrue rumors or fears about vaccines today make these deadly disparities even worse. We must all do our part to educate ourselves and share the right facts.

A group of Black experts led by Dr. Thomas A. LaVeist, a medical sociologist and the dean of the School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine at Tulane University, and Dr. Georges C. Benjamin, a physician and the executive director of the American Public Health Association, published an op-ed in The New York Times sharing their own confidence in the research showing the available vaccines are safe and effective. They write: "We are among 60 Black members of the National Academy of Medicine, the premier health science organization in the United States. Together we are scientists, doctors, nurses, other health care professionals and public health experts. We feel compelled to make the case that all Black Americans should get vaccinated to protect themselves from a pandemic that has disproportionately killed them at a rate 1.5 times as high as white Americans in cases in which race is known . . . Disinformation about the coronavirus and vaccines has pervaded social media, feeding on long-held and absolutely warranted distrust of health institutions in Black communities. The lies are an assault on our people, and it threatens to destroy us."

They note Black scientists helped develop and test these vaccines, including Dr. Kizzmekia Corbett, the leading immunologist at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) who worked on the Moderna vaccine. Dr. Corbett said recently: "I have studied health disparities since I was in college. I'm a double major in sociology. I understand the intricate interlacing of science and health, particularly for disparities, and particularly for people of color. So it's near and dear to my heart. It's actually the reason vaccine development is important to me and is where I chose to take my viral-immunology career. Vaccines have the potential to be the equalizer of health disparities, especially around infectious diseases. I could never sleep at night if I developed anything—if any product of my science came out—and it did not equally benefit the people that look like me. Period."

Experts like these are valuable sources of information for our communities, adding to the messages from Dr. Anthony Fauci and other trusted voices. Organizations like the Black Coalition Against COVID-19, whose allied health, academic, civic, civil rights and faith organizations include the NAACP, the National Council of Negro Women, the National Urban League, the Links, the National Pan-Hellenic Council of the "Divine Nine" historically Black Greek organizations, the National Black Nurses Association, all four historically Black medical schools and the African Methodist Episcopal Church, are doing their part to share the most up-to-date science-based information and address questions and concerns. Congregations, community leaders and others are joining in.

Please be sure you and your family seek out sources you trust to answer any questions you have. We all need to be fully informed and armed for this latest life or death fight.

To Be Equal:

#StopAsianHate: Racism, Misogyny and Easy Access to Guns Are a Deadly Combination

"I can't remember ever having experienced racism separate from sexism. When I turn into a lane too slowly on the streets of Los Angeles, I am not surprised if someone rolls down the window to call me a 'c---- b----.' When I reject or ignore sexual propositions from white men, some come back at me with racial slurs and even threats. Even the perception that I will not fight back if I am attacked racially is a form of racism intersecting with sexism. This is the lived reality for too many Asian American women."

—Sociologist and author Nancy Wang Yuen

[Last] week our nation suffered another deadly shooting spree inspired by misogyny and racism, enabled by irresponsibly lax firearm regulation.

A self-described "sex addict" seeking to rid himself of "temptation" fatally shot eight people at Atlanta-area massage parlors, six of them women of Asian descent. The initial response of investigators, who downplayed the role of race in the killings, revealed a disturbing ignorance of the nation's history of sexualized racism and violence.

Even the agency investigating the shootings appears to be steeped in anti-Asian sentiment. Not only did its spokesman express empathy for the shooter, saying he was "at the end of his rope" and was having "a really bad day," but that same sheriff's deputy has made anti-Asian social media posts and promoted a racist t-shirt.

The suspect purchased a gun just hours before the killings; Georgia requires no waiting period for firearms sales. The state has earned an "F" from the Giffords Law Center on its on their annual scorecard of gun laws in all 50 states. Easy access to firearms—most background checks take about 100 seconds, according to Giffords' executive director—is especially deadly in a climate of rising hate crimes and record levels of white supremacist propaganda.

[Recently], Center for the Study of Hate and Extremism at California State University reported that hate crimes targeting Asian people rose by nearly 150 percent over the last year, stoked by former President Trump cynically seeking a scapegoat for his tragic mishandling of the coronavirus pandemic.

White supremacist propaganda in the form of flyers, stickers, banners and graffiti doubled in 2020, reaching the highest level ever recorded by the Anti-Defamation League.

Stop AAPI Hate, a national coalition addressing anti-Asian discrimination during the pandemic, received nearly 3,800 reports of hate incidents over the last year, ranging from verbal harassment to workplace discrimination to physical assault. When women are the targets, racial slurs are often accompanied by crude references to sex.

"Killing Asian American women to eliminate a man's temptation speaks to the history of the objectification of Asian and Asian American women as variations of the Asian temptress, the dragon ladies and the lotus blossoms, whose value is only in relation to men's fantasies and desires," Sung Yeon Choimorrow, executive director of the nonprofit National Asian Pacific American Women's Forum, said.

The National Urban League rejects the objectification, fetishization and stereotyping of women of color. Our hearts are with the families who lost their loved ones, including Delaina Yaun, mother of a 13-year-old boy and an 8-month-old baby girl; Paul Andre Michels, an Army veteran and business owner; Xiaojie Yan, owner of the spa where she was shot; and Daoyou Feng. Police have not released the names of the other four victims, but our prayers are also with them and Elcias R. Hernandez-Ortiz, who was wounded.

Last month, the National Urban League and other civil rights and social justice groups outlined a comprehensive set of actions to combat anti-Asian hate and violence. These include:

- Enacting comprehensive hate crime laws at both the state and local levels and ensuring that law enforcement agencies fully implement and enforce them;
- Uniform Crime Reporting agencies need to standardize and include more details in their documentation of hate crimes;
- Local law enforcement and state agencies should fully comply with the Hate Crimes Statistics Act, and efforts should be made to include detailed data on the Asian American and Native Hawaiian, Pacific Islander communities;
- A public campaign to push back on hate speech promoted by government officials and those running for office; and
- Greater investment in linguistically and culturally competent community resources.

After four years of policy, rhetoric and messaging at the highest levels of government that fanned the flames of bigotry and inspired acts of violence against communities of color, the pandemic has brought us to a crossroads. It exposed America's racial fault lines in nearly every indicator—health care, economic stability, justice, and democracy—and forced the nation to confront its legacy of white supremacy. We must seize the opportunity to create lasting change by emerging from this crisis a stronger nation determined to achieve a more perfect union for all its people.

Chris Van Hollen

United States Senator for Maryland

Van Hollen, Capito Introduce Bipartisan, Bicameral Legislation to Support National Children's Museum

WASHINGTON (March 18, 2021)—Today, U.S. Senators Chris Van Hollen (D-Md.) and Shelley Moore Capito (R-W.Va.) introduced legislation to provide measured fiscal relief to the National Children's Museum, through a GSA agreement to pay the Museum's leasing fee. Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton (D-D.C.) and Congressman Rodney Davis (R-Ill.) introduced the House version, H.R. 1703, on March 10, 2021.

Founded as the Capital Children's Museum in 1974, the Museum served children and families in the Washington region for thirty years in Northeast Washington, D.C. In 2003, the U.S. Congress designated it the National Children's Museum (NCM), and for several years, NCM operated as a museum without walls by serving the region through traveling exhibitions, partnerships with other nonprofits, as well as community and school outreach programs. From 2012–2015, a small museum space was opened to the public at National Harbor, but closed in preparation for NCM's next chapter in downtown D.C.

Unfortunately, the NCM reopened just days prior to the pandemic and had to once again close its doors until it is safe to reopen. Due to these circumstances, the Museum has faced severe fiscal challenges. This legislation would direct GSA to enter into an agreement with the Museum to cover its leasing expenses—approximately $1 million annually—as GSA does for the other Congressionally designated national museums.

"For years, we've worked to get the National Children's Museum officially up and running in our national capital—after it had already served our communities for decades. But as with many organizations across our country, the pandemic could not have come at a worse time for the reopening of the Museum. Providing this modest fiscal relief to the Museum—which all other Congressionally-designated museums receive—will help it weather the COVID-19 storm and ensure that it can continue to bring joy to children visiting it for generations to come," said Senator Van Hollen.

"In 2003, I joined with my colleagues to designate the National Children's Museum. Its recent reopening at a new location near the National Mall came at an unfortunate time, as the COVID-19 pandemic prevented our nation's kids from experiencing all the museum has to offer. This effort will help ensure that as life returns to normal, the National Children's Museum will be there to provide enriching experiences for children in the D.C. area and from around the world," said Senator Capito.

"Thank you, Senator Van Hollen, for reintroducing this important bill in the Senate. The National Children's Museum is the only congressionally designated museum expected to pay rent in a federal building. This bill would allow NCM to remain in its current federal location without payment of rent, allowing it to focus on bringing 21st century science, technology, engineering, arts, and math learning techniques to the nation's capital," said Congresswoman Norton.

"The National Children's Museum is one of many key attractions for American families visiting our national capital. It's unfortunate that pandemic restrictions forced the museum to close shortly after moving to a new location, but with vaccinations increasing exponentially each day, families will be eager to once again visit Washington. Our bipartisan legislation provides the Museum with financial flexibility to focus their resources on serving children who visit and would treat the Museum like other Congressionally-designated museums," said Congressman Davis.

"National Children's Museum is a crucial part of the cultural landscape in our nation's capital. The Museum is a home for innovation and science education, serving children and families through hands-on exhibits and programs. Despite having to close our doors just 18 days after opening in February 2020, the Museum has served teachers and students in 45 states + DC with virtual field trips and other digital resources throughout the pandemic. Private donations allowed for the renovation of a previously empty federal space into the Museum, but we are now the only Congressionally-designated museum expected to pay rent to the federal government. The Museum will bring in millions of dollars in federal revenue every year through the building's parking garage and other amenities, but this legislation is critical to its success," said Crystal Bowyer, President and CEO, National Children's Museum.

"The National Children's Museum is unique in the landscape of Washington, DC's museums and fills a void in the city with its new home in downtown DC," said Elliott L. Ferguson II, President & CEO of Destination DC, the official destination marketing organization for Washington, DC. "We know that when the museum reopens, it will be a top attraction in the city welcoming visitors and locals alike. The pandemic has been challenging for everyone, especially children. Having a fun, educational and centrally-located museum that's just for them will assist in ensuring a vibrant downtown for family travel and is an undeniable strength while promoting Washington, DC as a top travel destination."

"Museums are a vital part of the nation's education infrastructure. This legislation is critical to ensuring the National Children's Museum can devote its resources to supporting the STEAM education of children and families not only in the nation capital region, but across the country," said Laura Lott, president and CEO, American Alliance of Museums.

The teachers chosen for this honor represent NHD's 58 affiliates across the country and around the world. NHD affiliates include all 50 states and the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and international school programs in China, South Asia, and South Korea.

Ellerbe, Pleasant, and Theberge all participate in Maryland Humanities' Maryland History Day program, an affiliate of National History Day. One of Holden's students independently submitted their project and advanced to the county-level competition. Maryland History Day students create original documentary films, exhibits, performances, research papers, or websites exploring a historical topic of their choice on an annual theme.

"The skills and strategies Dr. Ellerbe, Ms. Holden, Mr. Pleasant, and Ms. Theberge are developing through this series will benefit their students over the course of their academic and professional careers," said National History Day Executive Director Dr. Cathy Gorn. "As a Library of Congress TPS Consortium member, NHD is incredibly fortunate to be able to offer this opportunity for teachers, especially now as teachers and students continue to address challenges of non-traditional learning settings required by the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic."

Along with NHD, Maryland Humanities is also a member of the Library of Congress TPS Consortium through a partnership with Maryland Public Television and Maryland State Department of Education, funded by the Library of Congress. Through this membership, Maryland History Day at Maryland Humanities has created 190 online history inquiry kits for use by educators and students engaged with research. The kits examine social studies/ history themes and allow for students to select a research topic of interest and analyze themed primary sources from the Library of Congress and other online resources. Our TPS Consortium funding also supports two week-long professional development workshops for Maryland educators held each July in partnership with Salisbury University and the National Archives. The inquiry kits, a dozen interactive learning modules, and other resources can be found at thinkport.org/tps.
